Faraday Future to Highlight U.S. Innovation and Trade Policy Goals at Private Capitol Hill Reception in Washington, D.C. on July 23

"We look forward to joining policymakers and thought leaders in D.C. for an evening of shared ideas and forward-looking discussion," said Matthias Aydt, Global Co-CEO of Faraday Future. "This reception reflects our ongoing investment in American EV leadership and our desire to work collaboratively toward policy solutions that enable growth and innovation."

The invitation-only event will bring together Members of Congress, senior Administration Officials, and key industry stakeholders for a relaxed, interactive evening highlighting FF's next generation electric vehicle (EV) innovations and its commitment to strengthening domestic manufacturing. The reception is designed to foster strategic relationships and elevate public discourse around trade and American competitiveness, with a focus on the future of U.S.-based EV production.

The event will begin at 5:00 PM on the third floor of the Capitol Hill Club, located at 300 First Street, SE. The format will remain relaxed with light food and hors d'oeuvres served throughout the evening, creating space for meaningful conversations between Company leaders and key policy makers.

The reception may also feature an on-site display of Faraday Future's flagship FF 91 2.0 and the Company's new FX Super One MPV, offering an up-close look at the Company's AI-driven mobility platforms and design innovations.

The reception is part of FF's broader strategy to amplify the Company's voice in policy discussions and reinforce its role in shaping the future of intelligent electric vehicle transportation in the United States.
